Is It COVID-19, Flu or Cold?

By now, we are all familiar with the novel coronavirus, or COVID-19. During the flu and cold season, how do you know if that throat tickle or cough is COVID-19, the flu or a cold?

COVID-19

The most common symptoms of COVID-19 are fever, cough, shortness of breath, fatigue and loss of appetite. Diarrhea, nausea and vomiting are less common symptoms. Some people don't have symptoms. It can take up to 14 days for symptoms to appear.

If you are concerned about your symptoms, contact your doctor to find out whether you should be tested. Most people who get COVID-19 will be able to recover at home.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention*, there are several things you can do to prevent the spread of COVID-19:

- Wash your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after going to the bathroom; before eating; and after blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing.
- Avoid close contact with people who are sick.
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth.
- Stay home when you are sick.
- Cover your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then throw away the tissue.
- Clean and disinfect frequently touched surfaces using a regular household cleaning spray or wipe.
- Cover your mouth and nose with a face mask or cloth face covering when you are outside your home.

Check out www.BlueChoiceSC.com/COVID-19 for more information.

Flu Versus Cold

Flu and the common cold are both respiratory ailments, but they are caused by different viruses. Because both have similar symptoms, it can be difficult to tell them apart. Generally, the flu is worse than the common cold with more intense symptoms.

Tests done within the first few days of illness can tell if a person has the flu. The symptoms of flu can include fever, chills, cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose, muscle or body aches, headaches and fatigue.

These same symptoms can indicate a cold, but are usually less severe. Most people get colds in the winter or spring, but it is possible to get a cold any time of year. Adults have an average of two or three colds per year, and most people recover within seven to 10 days.

Prevention

There are three actions that can help protect you against the flu:

First, everyone 6 months of age or older, with rare exceptions, should get a flu vaccine. A flu vaccine can reduce flu illnesses, doctors' visits and missed work. The flu vaccine has also been shown to be lifesaving in children.

Second, some healthy habits can help prevent illness:

- Avoid close contact with people who are sick.
- Stay home when you are sick.
- Cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing.
- Wash your hands.

Third, antiviral drugs can help if your flu symptoms are severe. Antiviral drugs are different than antibiotics. Flu antivirals are prescription medicines that are not available over the counter. Antivirals can make the illness milder and shorten the time you are sick. They can also help prevent serious complications.

Flu Season Is Here ... Get Your Flu Vaccine

This year, a great deal of attention has been focused on the COVID-19 pandemic — and rightly so. It's been more than 100 years since the world has experienced such a widespread and serious threat to our health. But as we move later in the year, another — more familiar — health concern is on the horizon: flu season.

As scientists work at a record pace to develop a COVID-19 vaccine, we are fortunate that a yearly flu vaccine already exists. This vaccine can greatly lower your chances of getting the flu. If you do get the flu, the vaccine can make it less severe. Getting a flu vaccine is even more important this season. It will reduce your risk from the flu, and help conserve potentially scarce health care resources that may need to be dedicated to those with COVID-19.

Help protect yourself and your community: Get a flu vaccine!

Taking Care of You

The need to stay at home and limit contact with others is important right now, but it can be lonely and isolating. Loneliness can take a toll on both our mental and physical health. While there are many things around us that are beyond our control, there are things you can do to take care of yourself during these times. Here are some tips:

- Take breaks. Take breaks from watching, reading or listening to news stories, including those on social media. Hearing about the pandemic repeatedly can be upsetting.
- Take care of your body. When you're spending lots of time at home, it can be easy to fall into a routine of sleeping, snacking and watching TV. You'll probably feel better if you try to stay on a normal routine. Try to get up and go to bed at your usual times. And remember to eat healthy, well-balanced meals and get plenty of sleep.
- Make time to unwind. The benefits of yoga and meditation are widely known. Set aside time each day to be alone with your thoughts and/or do some light stretching. Also, take time to do things you love — this could mean trying a new recipe, crafting, reading, going for a walk in your neighborhood or listening to music.
- Connect with others. A smartphone or computer may be a lifeline for social connection. Call, text or video chat with friends and family. Older relatives especially may feel cut off and will value your call. Try hosting a virtual family gathering or happy hour with friends using an app like FaceTime, WhatsApp or Zoom.
- Focus on the positive. While it can be easy to focus on what's wrong, make a point to seek out and focus on all that is good in the world. The mind is a powerful thing. You'd be surprised at how a simple change in perspective can change your whole day.
- Look for ways to help. Being a helper can keep you connected to others and help you focus on the greater good. Here are some ideas:
 - Check into donating blood — it's an urgent need in many areas.
 - Give online to food banks and other aid organizations.
 - Buy online gift cards from local businesses. This can help them survive until they can open again.

Staying home may be boring and lonely. It's especially hard for people who thrive on social connection, but you can feel good about what you're doing. Staying home helps protect yourself, your neighbors and those you care about.

Where Should I Go for Mental Health Care? Your Total Health Is Our Top Priority

Navigating a global pandemic and its effects can cause you more stress than normal. And staying “healthy at home” can leave you feeling disconnected from family and friends. Don’t let it take a toll on your mental health. Whether you are coping with stress and anxiety, feelings of isolation, or struggling to meet everyday obligations, we are here to help you. Your total health is our top priority.

Options for treatment

It is always good to know what options are available and when the time is right for using them. If you are already seeing a mental health provider, first contact that provider or your primary care physician.

Here are several other options that are part of your health plan:

Behavioral Health Coaching

Mental health is an essential part of each person’s overall health and wellness. If you are living with a mental health condition, you may be struggling to cope effectively with life’s challenges. Our health coaching program provides you with support and guidance. And it motivates you to make positive lifestyle changes. For more information, call 800-868-1032, ext. 25835.

Blue CareOnDemand

Blue CareOnDemand offers a convenient, time-saving option. Video chat with a licensed counselor, therapist, psychologist or psychiatrist from your home or wherever you feel most comfortable. Support doesn’t have to stop after your first consultation. You can schedule follow-up appointments at the time and frequency that are right for you.

Access Blue CareOnDemand at www.BlueCareOnDemandSC.com or download the Blue CareOnDemand app on your Apple or Android device.

Urgent Care

If your situation is urgent and your doctor’s office is closed, visit an urgent care center. That’s the best place for medical problems that need attention right away, but are not life-threatening, and problems that could get worse if you wait. Urgent care visits are easy, convenient and affordable. Go to www.DoctorsCare.com to schedule an urgent care visit.

Emergency Room (ER)

For episodes when a person is a danger to themselves or others, call 911 or go to the ER. Hospitals have taken steps to reduce the risk of spreading coronavirus. If you or a family member is having a behavioral health emergency, the risks of staying home are greater than the risks of going to the hospital.

Diabetes 101

Diabetes is a long-lasting condition. The two most common types are Type 1 and Type 2. Type 1 is an auto-immune disease where the body's immune system attacks itself and the pancreas no longer functions. This means the pancreas no longer produces insulin, a hormone that enables people to get energy from food. Taking insulin is necessary for the treatment and survival of people who have Type 1 diabetes.

Type 2 diabetes is a metabolic disease in which a person's body still produces insulin, but is unable to use it effectively. Lifestyle factors, such as obesity and inactivity can lead to complications when you have Type 2 diabetes. The goal is to take healthy steps each day to control your blood sugar, improve your quality of life and be healthier.

Managing your diabetes takes some understanding and action. Take action each day by following these tips:

- Take medications exactly as directed
- Make healthy food choices and stay active
- Do not use tobacco products
- Limit sweets and added sugars, and high sodium foods like fast foods and frozen meals
- Use the "diabetes plate" to plan your meals
 - Half of a plate with non-starchy vegetables (asparagus, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, eggplant, okra)
 - One-fourth of a plate with lean protein (chicken, turkey, beef, pork or plant-based protein)
 - One-fourth of a plate with carbohydrates (rice, pasta, potato or beans)
 - Water or low-calorie drink
- Schedule a diabetes care visit with your doctor at least once a year. During your visit:
 - Review your diabetes care plan, including medicines, nutrition, activity and weight.
 - Get your A1C checked twice a year. On average, your goal should be less than 7 percent.
 - Get an LDL cholesterol blood test. On average, your LDL should be less than 100.
 - Get a urine microalbumin test to monitor your kidney function.
 - Get your blood pressure checked and keep it under 130/80.

If you have questions about diabetes, you can call one of BlueChoice HealthPlan's diabetes health coaches in the Great Expectations for Diabetes program at 855-838-5897.

Choosing Wisely

In the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic, many people are not seeking the health care they need. How do you know what tests and procedures are right for you?

Choosing Wisely is a national health education campaign that encourages dialogue between you and your doctor to avoid unnecessary tests.

Why is the Choosing Wisely program needed?

Some medical tests, treatments and procedures provide little benefit. And in some cases, they may even cause harm. This can lead to unintended consequences, like follow-up testing and more costs for the patient.

How do I know if a medical test, treatment or procedure is really needed?

Sometimes patients rely on the expertise of the physician to tell them what the course of action should be. This is where Choosing Wisely can help. The goal is to empower you to take an active role in your health care decisions. Choosing Wisely supports you in becoming a better consumer of the care you receive by promoting conversations with your doctor.

What should I ask my doctor?

Here are five questions to start with:

1. Do I really need this test or procedure?
2. What are the risks and side effects?
3. Are there simpler, safer options?
4. What happens if I don't do anything?
5. How much does it cost, and will my insurance pay for it?

What is Choosing Wisely based on?

The suggestions in Choosing Wisely come from various medical societies organized under the American Board of Internal Medicine Foundation. The resources come from the medical community, not the insurance company.

Where can I find more information?

To learn more about the campaign, visit www.choosingwisely.org.

Choosing Wisely is an initiative of the ABIM Foundation, an independent organization that provides health information you may find useful.
